

Advertisement

washingtonpost.com > Arts and Living > The Classical Beat

Advertisement

Network News

MY PROFILE X

Friends' Activity

View More Activity

ABOUT THIS BLOG

The premise of this blog is that it's everyone's right to have an opinion about classical music. The Classical Beat is not only a one-stop hub for classical music news, views, and voices around the internet; more importantly, it is an official forum for the dialogue we need to keep this field vital. Read more

About the blogger

SEARCH THIS BLOG

Search input field with 'Go' button

RECENT POSTS

- NSO in a new state
Choral changes
CSI: opera
The Dude does Carmen
Side dishes: creativity in the opera house

Entries By Category

- Add category
CD reviews
Washington
from readers
interviews
local reviews
music history
music on the Web
news
opera polls
random musings
Full Category Archive

Entries By Date

- Full Weekly Archive

SUBSCRIBE

Select ...

BLOG ROLL

- lonarts
DMV Classical
Clef Notes

In performance: Joel Fan

Web-only review:

Fan gives fantastic close to National Gallery's American Music Festival by Joe Banno

Pianist Joel Fan (a member of Yo-Yo Ma's Silk Road Ensemble) played a terrific lunchtime recital at the National Gallery on Wednesday of works by American composers who have embraced both the romantic past and a more dissonant present.

Elliott Carter's seminal 1945 Piano Sonata may have ranked as the program's most significant work -- a watershed piece that shows his early Copland-esque style morphing into the 12-tone rigors of his later years -- but the afternoon's highlight was Leon Kirchner's 2006 Piano Sonata No. 3. A work commissioned, premiered and recorded by Fan (a former student of the composer's at Harvard), the sonata is one of those intoxicating Kirchner cocktails of Lisztian rhapsody, Straussian opulence, mercurial shifts of emotion that evoke Mahler, and 12-tone structures that only rarely yield harshness. (read more after the jump)

Sets of miniatures by William Bolcom (who uses dissonance only as a seasoning in his wry "Nine New Bagatelles") and Derek Bermel (weaving Thelonious Monk harmonies, swung rhythms and atonality into the pungent "Funk Studies") completed an uncommonly cogent and absorbing program. Nothing in these daunting scores -- the Carter most punishing of all -- ruffled Fan's commanding technique, and he deserves special praise for the spontaneity, wit and emotional urgency he drew from music that in other hands might sound merely thorny.

-- Joe Banno

Other voices: Before his Washington appearance, Fan performed in Baltimore on Tuesday to a woefully meager audience: the Baltimore Sun's Tim Smith reviewed the recital.

By Anne Midgette | December 3, 2009; 6:07 AM ET
Categories: local reviews

Save & Share: [Email, Facebook, Twitter, RSS, Blogger, YouTube, LinkedIn, StumbleUpon, Dribbble]
Previous: Holiday music
Next: NSO: country roads

Comments

An excellent, top-tier short review. Thank you. I regret that last minute work commitments kept me from this concert that promised to be -- and apparently was -- a highlight of the Washington autumn season.
(I would only add that the Carter, as well as the Kirchner, was influenced by the

- Wolf Trap Opera
- Phillip Kennicott
- Infodad
- Unquiet Thoughts
- Parterre Box
- OperaChic
- PostClassic
- Life's a Pitch
- Sandow
- Proper Discord
- Sounds and Fury
- Night after Night

Chopin and Liszt B minor Sonatas and also exhibits some 'mercurial shifts of emotion that evoke Mahler,' – although perhaps to a much lesser degree than Carter's later mercurial 'Night Fantasies'.)

Posted by: snaketime1 | December 3, 2009 9:41 AM | Report abuse

---

The comments to this entry are closed.

RSS Feed   Subscribe to The Post

© 2010 The Washington Post Company

Ways you can get us

- Mobile
- Apps
- Newsletter & alerts
- RSS
- Facebook
- Twitter

- Podcasts
- Widgets
- Post Store
- Photo Store
- Washington Post Live

Website

- About us
- Work for us
- Community Relations
- PostPoints
- Corrections
- Archive
- Contact the Ombudsman

Web site

- Make us your homepage
- Newspaper
- Subscribe to the newspaper
- Home delivery service
- e-Replica

Advertise

- In the newspaper
- On the Web site
- Mobile
- Events
- The Washington Post Company
- Corporate Web site

Partners